WASHINGTON.

American position in regard to reimbursement of its forces in Germany set forth by Secretary Hughes in a note addressed today to the five principal allied powers.

Identical copies of the communication have been placed before the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, and Belgium, having been delivered this morning by the American ambassadors.

SECRETARY HUGHES

Indicates that the American claim for payment of an equitable right, established jointly under the terms of the armistice, the treaty of Versailles, and the treaty of Berlin between the United States and Germany.

Equitable Right.

Using that the allied governments insist from Germany any "arrangement for the distribution of cash payment received from Germany to the claim of the United States," Mr. Hughes declares that the government of the United States believes that its right to be paid the actual cost of its army of occupation per capita with the cost of armament of the allied powers is not a clearly equitable right but is from any technical objection.

The formal statement of position set forth by the secretary of state has been occasioned by the apparent intention of the allied government to ignore the report of the army commission appointed by the supreme council last November which included calculations with regard to the American army, and made other arrangements for the allocation of German reparations which would not be the American claim.

Senate Ratification Loophole.

Senate denial is entered against the contention that, in view of the fact that the United States to ratify the treaty of Versailles, technical difficulties stand in the way of the American claim.

It may be pointed out, however, that Germany has explicitly consented to the priority of the claims of the American army of occupation, notwithstanding the fact that the treaty of Versailles has not been ratified by the United States.

House, however, in any technical objection to the application of the payment made by Germany to the claims of the United States claim rests mainly upon the refusal of the government of the allied powers to let them if they "seek to maintain in their behalf exclusively a first charge over all the assets and revenues of the German empire and its constituents for demands exhausting the full extent of the German government to the last."

The government of the United States finds it inconceivable," the secretary declares, "that any such a demand would be taken by the allied governments."

TEXT OF THE NOTE

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[By Associated Press.]—The text of the communication addressed to the governments of Belgium, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan on the American demand for payment of allied occupation costs follows:

The government of the United States has believed, and still believes, that the governments of the allied powers have no disposition to question the right of the United States to be paid, upon an equal footing with the actual cost of its army of occupation which it has maintained in Germany since the joint armistice of Nov. 11, 1918.

While the attitude of the government of the United States in expecting payment of these costs has been definitely set forth, it is deemed to be disseminated on page 4, column 2.

HOUSE TODAY WILL ACT UPON SOLDIER BONUS

Chicagoans to Make Final Appeal.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—The stage is set for action on the soldier bonus bill by the house tomorrow. Victory for the measure is assured. The opponents are in a hopeless minority.

The house rules committee today reported out a special rule suspending the regular order of business and making action on the bonus bill the order of the day.

It was stated that only one negative vote was cast in the rules committee on the question of approving the rule.

Representative Campbell of Kansas, chairman of the rules committee, announced that one hour of debate would be allowed on the rule. The house will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow in order to dispose of the matter in one day.

Appeal by Chicagoans.

One of the final appeals for the bonus will be made by representatives of Chicago. The Chicago city council's resolution indorsing the bill will be presented to President Harding at 1 o'clock tomorrow, when he will also hear arguments of the members of the special aldermanic committee who arrived in Washington today.

The conference at the White House will be preceded by two others, when the aldermen will meet with Senator Medill McCormick and afterwards with Congressman Fordney.

Ad. John F. Lyle held a conference with Senator McCormick immediately after arriving in the capital and the conference with Chairman Fordney was arranged. Through the cooperation of Senator McCormick and Congressman Sproul the aldermen also made appointments with other members of congress.

Debate Hours Divided.

When the house takes up the bonus tomorrow the hours of debate will be divided equally among supporters and opponents of the measure. Representative Fordney of Michigan, chairman of the ways and means committee, will be in charge of two hours of the time, but will assign half of his time to Representative Treadway of Massachusetts, a Republican member of the aldermen who also made appointments with other members of congress.

DOMESTIC.

Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas report slight earthquake shocks.

Oklahoma governor arrested on one of twenty-three indictments naming fifty-one persons as bribers, embezzlers and banking law violators.

ILLINOIS.

Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas report slight earthquake shocks.

Oklahoma governor arrested on one of twenty-three indictments naming fifty-one persons as bribers, embezzlers and banking law violators.

Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the ways and means committee, who is against the bill, will be in charge of two hours' time, but will assign half of his time to Representative O'Gaff of Arkansas, a Democratic member of the committee, who is in favor of the bill.

Passage of Bill Certain.

Both supporters and opponents of the bill concede that the necessary two-thirds vote will be obtained on a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Inasmuch as no amendment will be permitted, the debate will be of a general nature and will not be centered on any particular proposal for financing the measure.

After the bill is passed by the house there probably will be some delay before it is taken up by the senate finance committee.

The finance committee will not be able to give it any consideration until after the tariff bill is reported to the senate. The finance committee, however, is likely to take the bonus bill up soon after the tariff reaches the floor of the senate.

It is confidently predicted that, although the President does not favor the bill in its present form, he will not veto it.

TREATY AIDS ARE STRONG FOR RATIFICATION

Chamber of Commerce
Endorses It.

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING, Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special]—With the fight over the four-power Pacific treaty drawing to a close and an outpouring of oratory that kept the Senate in session until a late hour, several great organizations came forward with impressive statements for ratification of the pact.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, representing millions of business men, pointed out not only the advantages to the nation of acceptance of the work of the arms conference but the "disastrous consequences" that would flow from a failure to ratify the agreement.

What Ratification Would Attain.

The chamber's foreign affairs committee, of which Silas H. Strawn of Chicago is a member, pronounced "this group of treaties, including the four-power treaty, a sincere and well-reasoned effort" to attain the following objectives:

"Advance the principle of conference and discussion of international differences and facilitate the settlement of future differences by saner methods than those of war."

"Provide an immediate reduction of armament by specific agreement and competitive naval armament, thus减轻ing the burden of taxes which tend to stifle industry and oppress all men."

"Point the way for treatment of the larger problems of land armament."

Declaring that all the treaties should be ratified and that the four-power treaty is fundamental to the group as a whole, the committee added the following statement of its views of a failure of ratification:

"In considering the present international situation we are appalled at the consequences for the United States which we believe would follow a rejection of these achievements of a conference called on American soil by our President in response to a clearly expressed national aspiration."

Evil Results from Rejection.

"We are convinced a rejection would lead to these evil results:

"1. Disruptive and disintegrative governments and make our system a prey and reproach as having proved impotent to negotiate international agreements even when the initiative has been taken by our own government."

"2. Hinder the race for competitive naval armament and revive extravagant national expenditures and unbalanced budgets."

"3. Reinforce chaos in commerce and industry, throw our slowly reviving agriculture back into the low price depression from which it is just recovering, close down anew, our industries, and again the area of unemployment."

"4. Representatives of the Church Peace Union and the World Peace foundation presented to Vice President Coolidge and Senator Lodge the names of 14,000 members of the church favoring ratification of the treaties.

The names of the signers of the appeal are coming in at the rate of 1,000 a day, it was stated, and only forty-five clergymen refused to sign the petition.

People Are For It.

The committee for treaty ratification, of which George W. Wickersham is chairman, reported the results of a canvass indicating that the people are more significantly united for treaty ratification than they have ever been on any similar issue and that the opposition is negligible. The committee then summed up its survey:

"The church forces of the nation appear to be practically a unit in support of the treaties as they stand, as expressing the moral judgment of the people. They include Protestants as represented in the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America, the Roman Catholics as represented in the PARIS, March 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—The allied foreign ministers, who convened here today for consideration of the near eastern situation, sent telegrams this evening to Constantinople, Ankara, and Athens proposing an armistice between the Greeks and the Turkish Nationalists, fighting each other in Asia Minor.

The telegrams were signed by M. Poincaré, premier and foreign minister of France; Lord Curzon, British secretary for foreign affairs, and Signor Schanzer, Italian foreign minister.

'INFAMOUS,' SAYS MISS MCKAY OF PROBST'S CLAIM

Knew Swiss Butler Only as a Servant.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 22.—[Special.]—For the last forty-eight hours a painstaking investigation has been made of the situation resulting from the mention by August Probst of the names of two prominent young Pittsburgh girls.

The story told by the 24-year-old Swiss waiter at the exclusive Rolling Rock club at Pittsburgh, that he had exchanged secretaries with Miss Virginia Craig McKay and won her plighted word to be his wife, seems as a consequence of this inquiry, to justify the use of the word "hallucinations."

The facts seem further to warrant the indignation denials on behalf of Miss McKay and Miss Matilde C. Mellon, niece of the secretary of treasury, that any conduct of theirs gives Probst any right to involve them in the notoriety which his statements have caused.

Similar Causes—Similar Effects.

That the former resident of Berne, whose deportation is sought on the grounds that he is an insane alien, might have been inspired by reading newspaper accounts of the more successful outcome of the similar pre-marital venture of an Alpine compatriot of his also is a possibility which the investigation just concluded makes reasonable. The other case is that of Max Oser, whose engagement to Miss Matilde McCormick of Chicago has been announced.

Tonight by long distance telephone, Miss McKay, visiting with her mother in New York, again dispelled her impatience in the premises.

The whole thing is infamous," she declared. "Miss Mellon and I knew the man only as a servant. It is ridiculous to say that we exchanged notes with him. We have planned his horseback rides or on the golf links. I think it cruel of him to draw our into this."

Girl's Father Is Indignant.

J. Albert McKay, wealthy manufacturer, said: "My daughter doesn't even know the man, I am sure. It is unfortunate that her name should have been singled out for this notoriety. The legal authorities probably will see that justice is done, so far as her further annoyance of Virginia is concerned."

Mr. McKay said that in New York a newspaper has given a statement tonight by Mrs. McKay, which was simply a reiteration of her previous denial that the ex-waiter had any foundation in truth for his assertions.

J. D. Lyon, president of the Rolling Rock club, likewise insisted that it was disgraceful to involve the two young women with Probst's "nonsense."

Mr. McKay said that in New York a newspaper has given a statement tonight by Mrs. McKay, which was simply a reiteration of her previous denial that the ex-waiter had any foundation in truth for his assertions.

That he was arrested on March 22, last, was by an agent of the department of justice, and returned to Ellis Island.

That he was not only an alien with no legal right to be in America but that two physicians examined him and pronounced him insane, recommending that he be deported.

That he has been given a hearing before the federal authorities, and that if Probst is not insane and can prove his right to be in the United States he will not be molested.

GOLD COAST BURGLAR ESCAPES FROM JOLIET AFTER FIVE YEARS

With less trouble than he had in gaining entrance to over 200 Chicago homes, Adam Prochowski, known as the "Gold Coast Burglar," has slipped quietly out of the Joliet penitentiary some fifteen years before his sentence was to expire.

Chief of Detectives Hughes was notified yesterday of the escape, which occurred Monday.

ALLIES' TERMS MAKE GERMANS SAY 'WAR IS HELL'

Only Catastrophe;
Cabinet May Fall.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
BERLIN, March 22.—The note concerning today's demands on Germany by the allied reparations commission of Paris was handed to Chancellor Wirth during an official meeting. Their arrival has disrupted the activities of the entire German government. Cabinet members at the session said the new situation means catastrophe for Germany. Dr. Wirth was pale and nervous when he quit the meeting, deeming that all Germany's plans have been shattered.

In Gustav Stresemann, speaker of the People's party, said the coalition government is dead. Other party leaders say the allied demands will result in a collapse of the cabinet, inasmuch as it is believed that the politicians will not dare to accept the enemy's rulings.

The partial moratorium granted by the allies is conditional upon fulfillment of all the terms by May 31.

Here Are Demands.

All parties are agreed that it will be impossible to fulfill the new demands this year's German payments. The demands are as follows: Germany must pay $22,000,000 gold marks ($10,000,000), of which $20,000,000 gold marks ($70,000,000) already have been paid, and $1,450,000 in gold and $150,000,000 in materials. This includes the $20,000,000 gold marks ($10,000,000) in payment for the French, British and Belgian armies of occupation. Germany also must balance its budget by a 1,000,000,000 gold marks ($10,000,000) internal loan. Furthermore, it must cut down the printing of paper money.

In some quarters it is regarded that the entente is demanding violation of national sovereignty by insisting that the reichstag pass laws to suit its allies. Moreover, it is regarded as impossible to pass a law raising $80,000,000 marks (roughly $200,000,000) in new taxation by March 1. Although Dr. Stresemann says the minister can go through the formalities of passing the law, it would be meaningless.

Wirth May Resign.

The Wirth cabinet must resign in the opinion of the majority of the cabinet members, who regard the entente's action as giving a death blow to Dr. Wirth's eight months policy of fulfillment. It is believed that Dr. Wirth, and also Foreign Minister Walther Rathenau, will be forced from the leadership.

"It is an end to all fulfillment talk in Germany" is the way Dr. Stresemann gets it, and his party declares the present government must go.

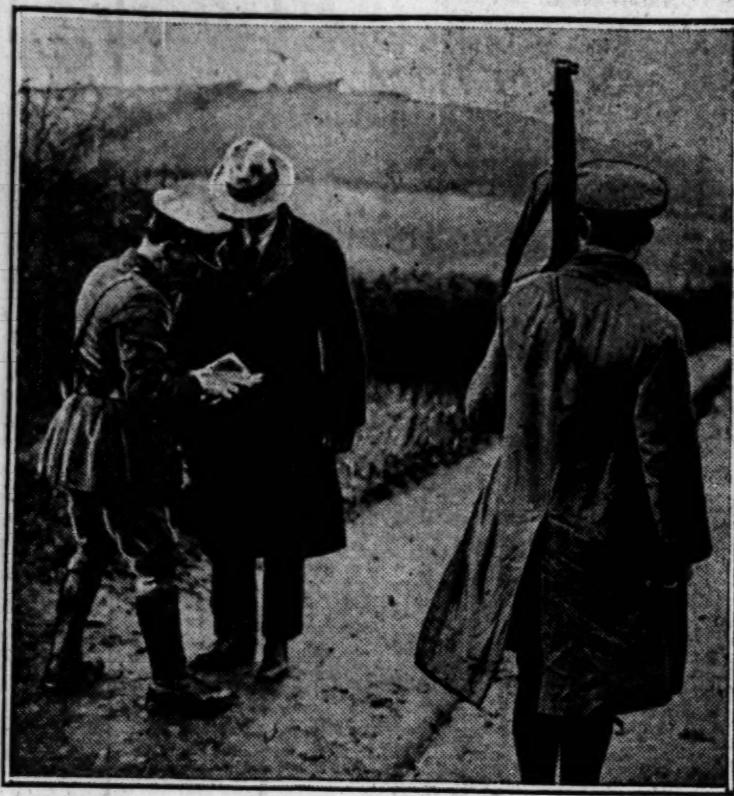

The Majority Socialists already have revived the plan of seizing gold and other materials of permanent value as a method of meeting the entente's demands. This comes in addition to the plan to put foreign debts down when the Majority Socialists were more powerful a year ago. But it is pointed out that this attack which the Socialists plan against capital only will net 25,000,000 marks (roughly $83,333,333) at most, whereas the entente wants more than double that amount.

"Economic Madness."

Concerning the entente's demand that some way be found to run the nation on a gold basis the German experts call this economic madness. It is pointed out that it would be foolish to tax a population earning depreciated wages, and that gold basis must be paper fluctuates rapidly. The experts propose no methods, but merely demands that a way be found. This is believed here to be thoroughly in keeping with the other entente demands which the Germans say were made without regard to the economic possibilities.

LLOYD GEORGE TO DEMAND ALL REDUCE ARMIES

Will Press Plan at Genoa Parley.

BY JOHN STEELE.
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

London, March 22.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—Prime Minister Lloyd George now plans to return to London on April 1 to prepare his speech on demand for a vote of confidence in his government in the house of commons on April 3. He is determined, it is said, to take the unprecedented course of moving the vote himself.

The reason for this is that he regards the situation in Europe today as unprecedented and requiring new methods. In his opinion only through the Genoa conference can Europe hope to escape disaster, and he is determined to go there with every ounce of backbone he commands.

According to the substance of his plan for Genoa, as told me today, he will insist that each state in Europe must arrange to balance its budget, must agree to abandon subsidies of all sorts, must reform currencies, cease to issue paper money, and return to gold or some other stable standard.

Most of this program can only be accomplished by the reduction of armaments and that will be insisted on at the first step, the alternative being the formation of a European army.

British credit and the insistence on immediate payment of debts to Great Britain, which are nearly double the British debt to the United States.

Wife Finds Her Husband
Dead in Bathtub in Home

Robert Webster, 42 years old, a clerk, 951 East 61st street, was found dead in the bathtub in his home yesterday by his wife, when she returned from a shopping tour in the loop. Death is believed to have been caused by heart disease.

The recent messages to the Soviet capital press, against the release of the Russian Socialist revolutionaries party imprisoned in Moscow will be given a public trial before a revolutionary tribunal, and not judged secretly, as was charged last week by members of the party living outside of Russia, says a message from Moscow today to the soviet trade delegation here.

The recent messages to the Soviet capital press, against the release of these prisoners are the result of the western Socialists being misinformed, says the message.

The abolition of the cheka and substitution of the state political department, continued the message, had the fundamental purpose of public trials of cases of treason and political crimes against the existing regime.

ARMY IS SLASHED TO A CORPORAL'S GUARD IN HOUSE

Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier, New Anthem.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special]—Ignoring the urgent appeals of President Harding and the war department for adequate national defense, the house today voted to reduce the nation to a condition of unpreparedness closely approximating the defenseless pre-war state.

The recommendation of the "little army" appropriations committee for an army of not more than 115,000 enlisted men was upheld against all efforts to amend it. Representative Kasten [Cal.] military affairs committee, made up of independent movement, with the backing of the administration, offered an amendment for 150,000 men, the present authorized strength. The amendment was rejected, 84 to 45.

Raid by Dixie Democrats.

Not content with merely cutting the army below what the war department regards as the minimum, southern Democrats proposed still more radical reductions. Representative Sisson [Miss.] offered an amendment for an army of 100,000. This lost, 98 to 21.

Representative Quin [Miss.] proposed an army of 50,000. This was likewise defeated, vice versa.

With all the amendments beaten, the committee's recommendation for 115,000 enlisted men was upheld.

But this reduction did not mark the end of the achievements of the "little army" men. They succeeded also in smashing the war department's plans for training a large and efficient reserve officers' training corps to be available as the nucleus for a citizen army.

The department wanted $4,000,000 for this purpose.

The committee allowed $250,000, proposed to increase the amount were made on the floor today by members of the military affairs committee, but without avail.

Insurrection Is Spreading.

Notwithstanding the success of the "little army" committee today, there were unmistakable signs of growing rebellion against the increasing concentration of legislative authority in its hands.

The naval affairs committee, aroused by the proposal to cut the navy to 65,000 enlisted men, took the bit in its teeth and reported a bill along the lines of the President's and the navy department's recommendations. The measure fixes the enlisted strength at $6,000.

An interesting tug of war between the two committees to determine the size of the army is in prospect when the navy bill is reached.

At the same time members of the military affairs committee launched a vigorous offensive against that section of the army bill under which it is charged congress would usurp important functions of the President as com-

HINES TO HELP I. C. C. DEFEND SUITS FILED BY 100 RAILROADS

Washington, D. C., March 22.—Walker D. Hines, former director general of railroads, has been employed by the Interstate commerce commission. It was announced today, to defend its action in the New England rate division case against legal proceedings instituted against it by nearly all trunk line railroads.

The suits were instituted this week by approximately 100 railroads which have their traffic on joint rate lines in England lines. The cases are expected to establish a new test of the power of the commission as extended by the transportation act and other postwar legislation.

Opponents of army reduction were vigorous in their denunciation of the or for more than 5,000 men in Panama or more than 8,000 in Hawaii. This section would lay down the principle of congress controlling the president in the matter of bringing troops back from Europe and China and to curtail radically the strength of the garrisons in the canal zone and the Hawaiian islands.

Mr. Mann [Ill.] took a supporting view. He contended that congress had the power to provide that "no money should be used for the payment of any except redheaded men in the army" if it saw fit. He doubted the wisdom of exercising such power, he said, but the existence of the power itself was unquestioned.

It would not be surprising to see the section knocked out. The administration is bitterly opposed to it and Secretary of War Weeks is sponsor for the statement that President Harding will veto the whole army bill if it comes to him with that section included in its provisions.

An outstanding feature noted by at-

FIND WAR HAVOC IN PHYSIQUE AND NERVE OF ARMY

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[By the Associated Press]—Physical examination of regular army officers now in progress has disclosed "the most clear cut evidence of physical deterioration" due to the "strain incident to the prosecution of the world war," according to a medical memorandum in the hands of war department officials.

It is based on informal reports from examining officers during the past year and a careful study probably will be made by the medical corps to gather data on which a formal scientific conclusion can be rested.

The doctors agreed in diagnosing the conditions found as "psychasthenia." They also have noted "a decided tendency toward increased introspection and mental exaggeration of all forms of worry and mild physical ills."

Opponents of army reduction were land's report to Maj. Gen. Harbord, deputy chief of staff.

It is standard army medical opinion as highly probable that full investigation may bring to light a positive, scientific explanation for some part of the restlessness that has been evident among the former soldiers since the war.

Symptoms of physical deterioration noted include:

"Instability of the nervous system, characterized more particularly by affection of the vasomotor system.

"An unnatural tendency to worry, fatigability, low blood pressure and lowered resistance to all infectious diseases."

Philip Rakowich, 2425 Indiana avenue, and Michael Kurnick, 2942 Wentworth avenue, were held to the grand jury yesterday in the South Clark street court charged with breaking into a poolroom.

EXCESSIVE FEES NOT FRAUDULENT, EXPERTS ASSERT

Seek Demurrer in Tribune
Suit for Millions.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The city paid in excess of $1,000,000 a little more than a year ago to City Building Experts Austin J. Lynch and Frank H. Mescer for the appraisal of structures in connection with certain street improvements.

"More exactness in payment does not constitute fraud," Attorney Matthias Concanon for Lynch told Judge Charles M. Foell yesterday in a demurser to THE TRIBUNE's suit to recover $1,065,080.95 and present further payment of $1,207,788.09 to the experts. "Ten times the rate would have been paid and it would not have been fraud."

"Suppose the payment were 100 times a reasonable amount," suggested Judge Foell.

"Not a Fraud Anyway."

"One hundred times would not constitute fraud," replied Mr. Concanon. "The bill of complaint asserted that the services of Lynch and Mescer were not worth more than $50,000, so 100 times the amount would be $5,000,000."

The complaint charges that the fees paid by the experts were distributed among others.

"This is not a wrongful act," said Mr. Concanon. "The experts could give the money to a political machine, their wives or others. That constitutes no wrong to either the city or the taxpayers."

Bill Improperly Drawn, He Said.

Concanon asserted that no wrong act was properly alleged in the bill to support a charge of conspiracy, which he claimed is necessary in a civil suit. That point he took up in detail nearly every allegation in the bill in an all-day discussion.

He ridiculed the contention of THE TRIBUNE that the services of Mescer and Lynch were worth not more than $5,000.

"That means about one-tenth of one per cent of the buildings appraised," said Concanon. "That rate on a building of $10,000 means only $10 for valuing the building, appraising the damage to it and the preparation of complete plans, drawings and diagrams of the building. To get all that for $10 is absolutely contrary to common sense."

The court does not have to decide whether a claim that $10 is a reasonable price for such work."

The opportunity for Howard Ellis and other TRIBUNE lawyers to reply will come later.

QUEENLY

MISS EVA BRADLEY.

The first will take place Saturday night when all of the leading candidates for West Town queen will take part in a procession which will start from Ashland avenue and Madison.

In the procession will be the seven floats, each a queen's throne for the seven queens who are to be chosen. Behind the floats will be the prettiest girls from various communities.

MURDER RIDDLES CLEARED UP BY 2 CONFESSIONS

through the alleged confessions of two other men under arrest.

Confess Killing Policeman.

Frank Lee, 16 years old, colored, and Charles Shader, 19 years old, white, have been held at the police station for several days following the suicide of Shader's sister because it is alleged her mother would not allow her to marry Lee, have confessed to killing South Park Policeman Harry J. Busse on Jan. 27.

Busse was held up by two men—one white, one colored. He reached for his gun. One of the men shot. Busse was killed. Lee, under questioning by Lieut. Daniel Lynch of the stockyards station, admitted participation in the holdup. He declared in a written confession that Shader did the killing.

Shader, who was questioned all night by Lieut. Lynch and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Wharton at an early hour this morning, admitted the murder.

Shader some months ago shot and killed his father. He was released by a coroner's jury when he testified that he shot to protect his mother.

Find Weapon on Suspect.

A description and the number of this gun was furnished the police, and it was found on Shader at the time of his arrest by Sergt. Raymond Breen.

Shader told the police that he had crept up behind the watchman as he was tending a stove and had struck him three times over the head with an iron bar. He is being questioned.

Another murder mystery was announced cleared by the police last night.

The procession will be the seven floats, each a queen's throne for the seven queens who are to be chosen. Behind the floats will be the prettiest girls from various communities.

On Monday night the winner of the queen contest in each community will ride on her throne, as will the winner of the high school contest. Among the young women who are candidates for the queenly honor is Miss Eva Bradley.

THE BOMBERS.

A bomb was thrown into the engine room of a plant manufacturing cabinet and interior wood work. It had been closed down for a while, but after the Landis award in the building trades settlement was reopened as an open shop and has been making the wood furnishings of the new Federal Reserve bank, which is being constructed under the Landis award.

When a man is held up or shot on the street and the assailant escapes without being identified, it is difficult to tell who committed the crime. It might have been any one from an amateur bandit to a professional criminal.

Bombing nearly always identifies a class because it reveals a motive. Bank robbers do not throw bombs into moving picture houses when picture machine operators are striking. Italian Black Handers do not throw bombs into flat buildings when there is a janitors' strike. Gamblers who have thrown bombs at each other would not throw a bomb into an interior wood work plant when there is a labor war—not unless they were hired to do it and then the crime would be higher up and where the interest was.

This general identification is on the face of about every bombing crime, and because that is so it is possible to discover and arrest the criminals. It may take time to do so, but detectives can find the men. The crime necessarily points to its source and reveals its purpose.

Detectives can get these criminals if they are really wanted, and the most dangerous criminal is not the man who throws the bomb but the man who hired him to do so. The principals in these cases do not often do the work themselves.

Probably the men who handled the bombs will be the first captured. They should be caused to tell who hired them. Then the instigators can be taken and indicted. They can be indicted in such fashion as to enable the prosecutor to try them on various charges and to continue trying them until a jury convicts.

Such cases should be assigned to such judges as the chief justice of the criminal branch knows to be unrelenting in the administration of strict justice. If the throwing of a bomb has resulted in murder, the men who hired the thrower should be indicted for murder and, if convicted, hanged. Chicago may have weakened a little since it hanged the anarchists, but it can come back again. The situation is just as bad now as it was then, and their citizens were determined to punish.

Fred Mader, president of the Building Trades council, told the city council that there would be violence. He knew what he was talking about. What he did not know was that there might be an unexpected consequence of violence.

We do not believe that law is helpless against the bombers. They have certain advantages. They have speed in automobiles. They can operate under darkness and a great many circumstances favor them. It cannot be foreseen where they will strike, but more difficult crimes have been handled by patience and determination, and gangs of criminals quite as dangerous have been broken up and punished.

The bombers can be caught and they can be sent to the rope or to the penitentiary.

THE $60,000,000 VOTE FUND.

Gov. Small, using his leave of absence from the Wanigan trial room to campaign throughout the state with his "vote for my men and get some road money" offer to the electorate, says that the Chicago traction interests are trying to destroy him. He says they get $20,000,000 loot every year by charging 5 cents car fare and they are after him to preserve it.

The best friend of excess street car fares is Len Small. The next best is Thompson. Small is heading well into his second year as governor and his administration has not cost the Chicago car users a cent. His commerce commission has so conducted itself that the car users get nothing.

Street car fares should be reduced, but neither Small nor Thompson has done anything to make it possible and they have done much to make it impossible. Small says in effect that the districts which do not vote for legislators who will stand by him will wait longer for their share of the state's $60,000,000 road fund than the Chicago car users. There is one thing we can say about Small. He is not beating about the bush. He is not intimating what he intends to do with the state money. He's telling it.

PORKING THE ARMY.

The proposals made by Representative Anthony of the little army men on the house appropriations committee are the most outrageous ever presented in congressional dealings with American military forces. Mr. Anthony, speaking for his faction, intends that congress shall say how the American army shall be distributed. This would be done by appropriating for certain fixed forces in the Panama Canal Zone, in Hawaii, in the Philippines, and elsewhere.

Decision as to needs would be taken away from the President, the war department, the general staff, and all military authorities. Congress would become the commander in chief of the army with respect to some of its movements.

This is partly malevolent stupidity and partly pork. A congressional idea of an army is one scattered throughout as many congressional districts as possible. The more it is injured as a military machine the better it is as a political machine. It is no good to an American congressional district if it is stationed in the Canal Zone, or Hawaii, or in any other overseas garrison. Mr. Anthony proposes, by restricting appropriations, to bring the garrisons home, where they will be of some use in political districts.

An army maneuver by divisions. The division is the unit which coordinates all branches and gives the infantry the technical support. An army cannot maneuver without the division unit and the division cannot operate for a long time if the branches have not been together before. The political idea is to scatter everything which the military scheme demands be kept together.

Secretary Weeks will ask President Harding to veto the appropriation bill if congress goes ahead with the scheme of usurpation of authority, and he undoubtedly will. In military affairs congress is a bad egg.

A SUBWAY—EVERYBODY'S NEED.

A TRIBUNE reporter experimented in getting from Michigan avenue to the Northwestern station in an automobile and was checked at ten traffic stops, made thirty-five gear changes, and took twenty-eight minutes for a trip which should be made in an hour from eight to ten minutes by a careful driver not in a hurry. The cost, he estimated, was about 6 cents in the mile and a half.

With some more figuring on the number of automobiles checked in and out of the loop during the day, he estimated that downtown congestion was costing automobile users about $20,000,000 a year. That is not a certified accounting, but the loss is great and to it must be added whatever value time has for the slowed down citizens of Chicago.

Generally the subway is considered solely from the viewpoint of the street car users whose time is wasted, whose comfort is destroyed, and whose decencies are violated. They are the greatest sufferers from the transportation system, but every one who tries to get in and out of the loop, in a hurry, on foot, with an automobile, with a team or a truck, suffers losses.

It is virtually as if all Chicago roads led into a swamp and that no matter in which direction a person wanted to go he had to pick his way at least half a mile, or more, over windfalls and tufts. All this wasted time has social importance aside from the waste of money.

It is not only an economic detriment to keep roads with obstacles in them, but it is a social aggravation which has effect on the life of the city and diminishes its attractiveness to citizens and visitors.

A great city with its streets radiating from a nucleus can never avoid some congestion, but it can control it and not be controlled by it. Chicago tries to jam a traffic into the loop which no longer can be contained within it.

It will never find relief until it puts part of its traffic under ground. It may be difficult for a Chicagoan to imagine the benefits which would result from that. Car users would have rapid transportation which would increase their area of selection for homes, release them from the painful rides which they now find disagreeable experiences in a work day, and cut down the price they have to pay for transportation.

Pedestrians would find freer streets and less torment of their nerves. Automobile users would not be forced into a place which almost destroys the usefulness of their cars. The Chicago loop is a region which cannot be concealed as the product of a sensible people. It asserts day by day that the people who endure it are either weak minded or are not their own masters.

The city has the money to begin the subway. It has the authority to do so. We do not know what it lacks, whether it is a spine or a head.

FORD AND WALL STREET.

Henry Ford says that he will exert every right at his command to keep the hands of Wall street off Muscle Shoals. "All I have to say is that I have great faith" in the sound judgment of the American people and trust that they will not stand silent and let Wall street put anything over on their representatives at Washington."

All we have to say is that if Wall street made any such proposition for Muscle Shoals as Mr. Ford has submitted, there would not be ten congressmen with the nerve to vote for it.

RAIDING CIVIL SERVICE.

The suit of nine former civil service employees of the Lincoln park board to compel their reinstatement in positions temporarily abolished under the Thompson-Lundin-Small control of the park will be watched with interest as a source of sworn testimony upon just how far the political machine can go in breaking down civil service for its own advancement.

The sixty day appointees in the city hall have been a scandal of the Lundin-Thompson rule for years. Capable and accredited men have been kept out of jobs by this arrangement to give patronage to the political gang. In this way the city hall machine has paid its supporters and maintained itself upon their supporters and maintained itself upon tax payers' money.

So successful has the system proved from the machine standpoint that Gov. Small, in association with Thompson and Lundin, last year attempted to extend it to the state by breaking down the civil service law entirely. This effort to open the way for paying the state machine's upkeep with jobs previously under civil service rules was defeated in the legislature over Small's vigorous protests.

But a way was found for operation of the scheme on a smaller scale when Small, Lundin, and Thompson gained control over Lincoln park. According to the park employees who are now suing for reinstatement, the machine abolished their jobs, throwing them out arbitrarily after years of continuous service. This being accomplished, the jobs were re-created and filled with political hangers-on.

The whole history of civil service in Chicago and in Illinois under Lundin-Thompson-Small control points to one conclusion. It is that nothing is sacred to this political machine. Custom, justice, and efficiency are alike sacrificed to political expediency. Testimony in the pending suit will be of interest and value to the voters of the city and state for the light it will shed upon such practices.

Editorial of the Day

BETWEEN AND AMONG.

(Illinois State Journal.) The latest objection to the four power treaty is that it contains an ungrammatical term. The debate in the senate has turned to the question, should "among" be used instead of "between" in the body of this pact. This is, indeed, a most serious point and before we go further a conglomeration of experts in English and in grammar should be called to settle it. May it not be possible that lurking in that "between" word there is sinister Japanese and English intrigue? It may mean that Japan, England, and France are together against us and consider themselves as one; hence "between" is used advisedly instead of "among," which would distinguish all four parties as individuals. "Between" indicates two parts. In this case the two parties must be Japan, France, and England on one side and the United States on the other.

The Arizonian senator who discovered this cleverly concealed attack upon our liberties has raised himself to the very pinnacle of patriotic achievement. He is a greater man than the fellow who heard the green cackling in Rome in time to save it from invasion.

Fill me, yet do not satisfy

A yearning for the Infinite.

A vision of what we might be.

But moments like these

We cannot live without.

JAMES ADDISON,

— DEDUCTIONS FOR ILLNESS.

Chicago, March 17.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In the case of an employee whose salary is on a monthly basis, and is paid semi-monthly, is it legal to make a deduction from such salary account absence of say, two days through sickness? If such deduction is legal, what basis should that be made? If it is not legal, what redress has such employer?

Certain employees are paid on the basis of so much per hour and in their cases I understand it is perfectly legal to make salary deductions, or rather fail to make salary allowances in respect of the hours which were not worked, but it seems to me that it is an entirely different proposition in the case of an employee in receipt of a straight salary of a certain amount each month, overtime not being paid for.

ON WITH THE FIGHT!

TWO LITTLE GIRLS TESTIFY AGAINST "TEX" RICKARD

New York, March 22.—Two little school girls testified today before the jury trial of Tex Rickard, on a charge of assaulting Sarah Kaindl. It is the sports promoter had impudently conducted himself with them, that he had given them money on each occasion, and more than once had offered them wine.

One of the witnesses was Sarah, the other her 12 year old friend, Nellie Goss. Sarah sat on the stand for two hours, and throughout a long cross-examination she kept to her story of having been assaulted five times by Rickard in two neighboring apartments just off 8th avenue on 47th street.

Nellie said she was present in another room on four of these occasions, that Rickard had tried to attack her once, but that she then escaped him. He told her, she said, to watch out and see that Sarah didn't go around with other fellows.

Sarah was asked by Rickard's lawyer, Max D. Steuer, if she hadn't considered Mr. Rickard's act as a terrible thing, and she replied af-

"Why did you go back to a man who had done such bad things to you?"

"I wanted some money off of him."

Sarah replied: "She told of having divided with her mother the sums received from Rickard. Then the promoter's lawyer brought out that Rickard had lent his influence to the mother's effort to have a son released from jail in Wisconsin by writing a letter to the governor of that state.

Rickard, one arm crooked against the back of his chair, the other held straight, his chin, gazed straight at both girls while they testified. Hundreds loafed in the corridors to watch Rickard as he entered and left the courtroom from and to his cell in the Tombs. A few score men were permitted to enter. The two witnesses were the only ones of their sex allowed to attend.

ALDERMEN NEAR FIST FIGHT, BUT THEY'RE HALTED

Aldermanic courtesy in the city council was shot to pieces yesterday in a session which ended with three aldermen, hanging on the coat tails of Ald. Edward J. Kaindl, who had started across the chamber to "clean up" Ald. Sheldon W. Govier.

Govier had asked that his signed charges against Russell J. Poole, secretary of the aldermen's committee on living costs, be referred to a special committee. Ald. Kaindl had moved that the charges be conducted to the living costs committee.

"My charges were steamrollered by a subcommittee appointed by Ald. Kaindl and I don't want them to go back to that committee again," Ald. Govier shouted.

"You didn't have enough manhood to come before our committee and substantiate your charges," Ald. Albert burled at Govier.

"I charge that Poole is a cheap grifter and that he tried to conspire with us to take the taxpayers' money," Govier yelled back.

On the vote there was a roar of "yeas" in favor of the Kaindl motion and only a few nays. That aroused Ald. Govier's anger and, turning toward Ald. Kaindl, thirty feet away, he shouted:

"You fear a fair investigation. I wouldn't come before your committee. The charges may stay there. You are all conspiring to protect a cheap grifter."

"You can't tell me I'm protecting a cheap grifter and get away with it," bellowed Ald. Kaindl, starting to pull off his coat and rushing at Ald. Govier.

With Govier doubling up his fists and shouting "Let him come on" Ald. Muicahy, Albert, and McDonough plucked Kaindl by collar and coat tails and brought about an armistice.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS AND THEIR PARENTS

The Problem of Dress for Girls

FOR GIRLS, our Spring Exposition is not only to show the prettiest fashions, but to help solve the problem of dress, which seems to have become so very complicated in these swift-moving days of conflicting tastes and standards.

Some schools have adopted uniforms, to get around the desire for sophisticated clothes which seem to have appealed so strongly to many girls of late; and so we have become headquarters for School Uniforms.

But, "dressing like every one else" does not appeal to every youngster, especially not to those in their teens, nor to those who have already found out how pretty clothes can make them.

Pretty clothes we have—in the smartest, most attractive, most charming styles becoming to youth; simple in line and in every way appropriate for girlhood.

Our Spring Exposition in the Girls' Room, 4th Floor, brings this out most pleasantly.

The Exposition are Girls' Cape Dresses, Suits, Knicker-sports Costumes, Taffeta and Pongee Dresses for Easter, Original Designs in Hand-made Frock, Blouses, Ginghams, Embroidered Wool Canton, Knit and Eponge Frock, and Coats.

E. GIRLS WIN.

March 20.—We were very pleased with the results of our Girls' Room on George Washington's birthday. The grammar and high school girls of all ages, in several different states, who read the Sunday edition of Teenage will note that I note with special interest that the most of the girls were girls; in fact, the grand majority, even the grand parents, were written by a girl. What a grand girl better than the average boy?

Our Spring Exposition in the Girls' Room, 4th Floor, brings this out most pleasantly.

For the very wee, the Spring Exposition shows the cutest sort of Bonnets, all hand-made with shirrings and wee ruffles, fitting close to the face.

For little 2 to 6-year olds, are new Easter Frock with Hats to match, new Play Dresses with Play Hats, and new Silken Coats—all in colors as lovely as the Spring Flowers they are playing they represent.

Almost everything for tiny girls has Bloomers. Bloomers seem more conspicuous than usual, because little skirts are shorter.

Becomingness of shape and becomingness of color are all that matter.

Our Spring Exposition for Baby Boys

SO DADDY CAN THINK of him as his great big boy and not a baby any more, we have little Trouser Suits still not too grown up for tiny boys, 2 to 4 years old.

But so mother can keep him for her baby just as long as she can, the new little Suits we have for little boys are very much embroidered.

The Trousers are a bit shorter, this season than last, and the waist line a bit higher. Mannish Polos and Tweeds are to be had; also, other attire without ruffles or unnecessary bows.

For little boys are Roll-brim Polo Hats like the one above.

Boys' Room, 4th Floor

Our Spring Exposition and the Boy Problem

ARE BOYS' trousers to be straight at the knee, like lads of fashion on the continent wear, or are they to be knickers?

Are boys to continue to wear three-quarter wool socks, or are they going to go back to those long, long-legged black hose that cover the knee and that are always wearing out there—particularly at this time of the year when a fellow plays marbles—and are always getting full of holes no matter what season? (You know how it is with trees to shin and fences to climb.)

Also, what about belts? If belts are stitched they can't be lost. At the same time, what boy would be out of style if it is not the style to have belts stitched? Here's a point both boys and mothers will be glad to have settled for them.

Then there are questions pertaining to pockets, materials, overcoat lengths and such points of masculine interest to be taken into consideration.

The Spring Exposition in the Boys' Room, 4th Floor, is very interesting. It answers all your queries about what a boy will wear this season. It shows the new things in boys' togs for school, country club, sea shore, and camp.

There's no Boy Problem here—leastwise not in clothing.

About Headgear

FOR older boys, the Spring Exposition shows soft, stitched Polo Hats, like the boy's in the large, center picture.

For older boys, there is also a display of Caps in bright-hued wools with enormous visors and large tops.

For little boys are Roll-brim Polo Hats like the one above.

Motor Making Oils Express An Ideal.

Discovery and development of the famous Cabin Creek oil fields in West Virginia, yielding the highest grade crude the world knows, gave Pure Oil Company its standard of quality. It made Tiolene lubricants possible.

In the acquisition of other oil producing properties throughout the country, the company has proved the singleness and constancy of its policies respecting high grade. Its command of the cream of American crudes is an outstanding achievement in oil production, and Tiolene lubricants are the result.

No less discriminating has Pure Oil been in the development of its remarkable refining properties and their strategic location with relation to consumer requirements. There are seven of these refineries with large capacity and every facility for manufacturing quality oils.

Thirty-five hundred miles of pipe lines serve these refineries, connecting with ten thousand oil wells. More than two thousand tank cars link these plants with a Coast to Coast distributing and marketing organization having two hundred units of storage and supply.

With its great pride of product built on a foundation of such physical strength, its Tiolene motor oils can only reflect the ideals of quality. There would have to be better crudes—and nature has not produced them—better facilities—and man has not devised them—to make better oils.

SUBWAY SEEN AS ONLY REMEDY FOR TRAFFIC DELAYS

Experts Find Flaws in All Other Plans.

Day after day as you squander time and money in threading the traffic labyrinth in Chicago's loop, it may interest you to know that transportation facilities in the congested district are approximately 30 per cent efficient, and that lack of a subway make them so.

Traffic experts easily disclose the seat of the transport trouble. They point out that the average loop street is 48 feet wide. Allowing 8 feet leeway for each motor vehicle, there is only two lines of vehicles. Operation of six moving vehicle lines is set as the traffic standard for a city of 300,000 population, according to traffic engineers. The Chicago loop allows an average of two moving lines for more than 3,000,000 people.

Subway Only Hope.

Authorities have abandoned all hope of relieving loop congestion without the aid of a subway, after a year of double-decking and like construction plans.

The city traffic survey just completed shows that every street in the loop exclusive of Michigan and Jackson boulevards, carries practically the same density of traffic. Thus the usual method of relieving congestion in other cities, the designation of one way streets, one way turns at intersections, and traffic segregation, is impossible.

"We were faced the task of diverting traffic from State street to Wabash or Dearborn, or from Washington street to Madison or Randolph, when all of these streets are choked with traffic which is practically the same," demanded R. F. Kelker, engineering expert, who directed the last count.

Left Turn Necessary Evil.

"We traced the route of an imaginary passenger car the other day to various points of destination in the loop and found that it would have to traverse an extra mile and a half if the suggested 'no left turn' regulations were authorized for several of the loop intersections. Chicago's traffic facilities make left turns a necessary evil, even though they do interrupt traffic at intersections."

Traffic students fail to see where the proposed automatic traffic controls can relieve congestion. In the general traffic moves, they declare that the traffic police can handle the situation best at individual intersections by keeping vehicles moving as fast as possible.

Facing Stone Wall.

In a typical five hour working day the late traffic count showed that 2,882 cars east bound turn at the various intersections of Washington street, while 2,392 east bound cars make the turns. At the same time 2,803 east bound cars were making the loop turns and 3,360 west bound vehicles were scattering throughout the loop. Jackson boulevard, a total of 59 cars were moving along Michigan avenue, between Jackson and Adams, during the same period.

The experts agree that they are facing a stone wall in the search of any known remedy for congestion. The subway now, they declare, is the one practical solution.

After receiving their instructions from Judge Pam the jury at nearly noon returned to their room to weigh the evidence laid before them. Apparently no two jurors had received the same impression from the testimony presented. At least one juror, which all twelve seemed to be participating, was heard behind the door, and Judge Pam was forced to caution the jurors to be more quiet in their deliberations.

At about 3:30 yesterday afternoon a message from the jurors was received by Judge Pam asking that a transcript of certain portions of the testimony be given them.

THE TIRE COMPETITION OF TOMORROW

HERE has been more advance in the art of tire making in the past five years than in almost any other one thing.

That so many of these advances originated with the makers of U. S. Tires is perhaps aside from the point.

The concern of the car owner himself is how he is going to benefit.

If tire manufacturers make no attempt to outwit each other in quality, where does the tire user get his consideration?

The makers of United States Tires urge upon everybody—manufacturer and dealer alike—a new kind of competition.

Let us compete for more and more public confidence.

Let us compete for higher and higher quality.

Let us compete for still more dependable public service.

This has been the developed U. S. Policy over a period of many years.

Today at present prices U. S. Tires are the biggest money's worth any motorist ever rode upon.

United States Tires are Good Tires

For the production of United States Tires there is erected and operating the greatest group of tire factories in the world.

A leadership that has recorded itself with the public. The outstanding example of what faithful quality and sound economy can do when it is patient enough to prove itself to a whole nation.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is most remarkable. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination to find a safe and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but they don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and remove it in a natural way. The liver at the expense of the teeth! Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the teeth, and strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel.

TAYLOR WHALES JIMMY KELLY IN MILL AT KENOSHA

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of the Tribune boxing representatives are:

Bud Taylor beat Jimmy Kelly at Kenosha, 10-9. Bud Taylor beat Matty Smith 110-115. Billy Kauts beat Matty Smith 110-115. At Houston, Tex.—Tillie Herman stopped Johnny Colmar 13-1.

By WALTER ECKERSSAL.

Kenosha, Wis., March 22.—[Special] Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., decisively defeated Jimmy Kelly of Chicago in their bout tonight. The Hoosier demonstrated his superiority every step of the way. The Italian did not win a round, but the opening sessions, which were devoid of action, were about even.

From the third round until the end, Taylor assumed the aggressive and did not permit Kelly to do much damage with body punches. In the seventh Kelly took a grand socking. Taylor smothered him with left jabs and hooks and crossed his right to the head and body for damaging results. Kelly fought back gamely, but Bud was the master at all times.

Tenth Furious Round.

The letter from J. E. Phitts, executor of the estate of Tim McCarthy, 67 years old, an uncle, wife, children, 19, son, and a daughter, left an estate valued at $40,000. Four surviving sisters and brothers of McCarthy and their children will share in the estate, the letter said.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 22.—[Special]—Those who don't believe that good, young pitchers are becoming scarce year by year had better consult the Braves' roster. There they'll find the names of Eddie Koerner, Tyler, ancient residents put to work by Manager Fred Mitchell, because he figured they might just have enough left in their systems to help the Braves up the grade in the coming flag.

Sports Through Edgren's Eyes

OB MARTIN, A. E. F. heavyweight champion, seems to have borrowed an idea from Tom Gibbons. Martin has been establishing knockouts record, but since he knocked out three men on three successive nights. This is good practice, and if he keeps at it he'll work into a position for a crack at the heavyweight championship in course of time.

Martin has been coming along as well as any one could expect. As a big fellow, it was all right for him to be a late bloomer. He began boxing while in the army in France at the age of 20. There he won the A. E. F. championship, knocking out twenty-two men in twenty-seven fights and winning the other bouts on points.

From Fighters' Breeding Ground.

Returning from the war, Martin went in for professional boxing. In 1920 he won fifteen of twenty fights with knockouts. Martin is 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds, and is well built. He has good fighting blood in his veins, and is the same part of the country that produced Jeffers and Dempsey—West Virginia. Both Jeffries and Dempsey were of old Virginia families.

Like Dempsey, Morris, and several other fighters from this section, Bob Martin has some Indian blood in his veins, the rest of his ancestry being Scotch and Irish, for several generations back American he is.

Both want a astage comeback, but they're playing a long shot. Rudolph has been practically inactive for several years, and in his last two seasons with the Cubs Tyler got by merely because he employed his head as much as his left hand.

Not considering what any of the pitchers have done, Mitchell thinks he will start this season better fixed than a year ago. The landing of Larry Kopf of the Reds for the shortstop has plugged a spot that was extremely bothersome.

The same deal that brought Kopf to the Reds Marquardt, the ancient north star, has been fixed. Mitchell didn't have a left hand on him, and there is no doubt that this cost him a few games at least. Marquardt will not be a sensation in Braves' togs, but he'll win occasionally, and that helps.

Barbara May Go to First.

With Ruth's gloom, the only infeld job goes to Holke at first. Ford at second, and Boebeck at third, Mitchell has no place for Barbara, who hit well over .300 last season when factoring in around the second sack. Barbara can play a fair game at first base, and he may appear there in place of Holke when the opposition is employing left fielders.

There are other infelds on the job now, but the last one is the job held by the name of Thomas Dooley. He originally played at Boston university and last season was at Norfolk, Va. He is a good fielder and fast, but, of course, lacks experience, and whether he can show enough to hold a utility berth remains to be seen. On Lloyd Smith, a first baseman from Greensboro, N. C., also has given some indications of eventually developing into a good man.

Oldtimers in Outfield.

As was the case last year, Powell, Southworth, and Cruise will look after the fly chasing details most of the time. Against southpaws, Nicholson will be substituted for Cruise. This leaves the lot for new boys.

For his best pitching bats Mitchell has Oescher, Marquardt, Fillippini, and McQuillan. In addition, he has Townsend and Morgan, both of whom were with the team last season. Of the entire lot, Oescher, of course, is the choicer, but Mitch thinks he may get good results from Townsend and Morgan.

Frank Miller, who, about eight years ago, belonged to the White Sox but never reported. Later he blossomed out with the Pirates. He had been on the retired list for two years, but was reinstated when he declared his intention of returning to the game. He is a fellow with a neat fast ball and a knowledge of how to pitch.

Uncovers Good Kid Pitcher.

Only a couple of real good kid pitchers have been uncovered. The best is Eugene Lansing, a big right hander, who was farmed out to Charleston, S. C., last season. He has a natural, easy delivery. His specialty is a fast ball, which is a good food control.

Anderson, a semipro from East Boston, has displayed a neat fast curve.

Gowdy, Gibson, and O'Neill will continue to corner the catching department. The only threat made on their stronghold is from Hugh O'Regan, who played at Boston college.

FASHION ROW IN RANDOLPH ST. GETS NEW SHOP

BY AL CHASE.

The trend of the women's apparel shops continues northward in evidenced in two more important leases just made public. J. H. Roberts, for many years secretary and manager of the Chicago store of the Louis Bryant company, has formed a new women's ready to wear concern known as J. H. Roberts & Co. and has rented two stores, the basement, and the entire second floor in the Ulrich building in Randolph street, just across Garland court from the Public library.

The lease made by William O. Trainer of Clark & Trainer calls for an average annual rental of $31,800 and is for a long term. There are approximately 8,000 gross square feet. The new store will open May 1. The building is now being completely remodeled.

Loop Firm to Cross River.

Strongly it calls attention more to the Loop as Michigan avenue development as a fashion center. Christian P. Hellesoe, president of the Hellesoe-Stelt company, women's apparel, which has been on S. W. Mich for eighteen years, first in the Stratford and later the Ward building, has leased for ninety-nine years the four-story apartment building at 116 East Walton place, $20,100, just off the boulevard, at a term rental of $23,000. The rental will be $1,500 the first year, from March 15, 1922; $1,800 annually the next five; $2,000 the next ten, and $2,500 yearly for the balance.

Mr. Hellesoe has not yet engaged an architect, but intends to spend about $15,000 in remodeling the building and will occupy the first two floors. Work cannot begin till present leases expire in November. Frederick M. Bowes and H. N. Rose were brokers.

The basement under the Crilly building, Dearborn and Monroe, long occupied in the wet days by Heilny's, has been leased by the Crilly estate to A. Morris for five years from May 1st, at a total rental of $50,000. He will use part as a billiard and poolroom and sublease space. Mark Levy & Bro. were brokers.

Ad Firm to Move Northward.

The William H. Rankin company, in the Monroe building for several years, announces it will take larger quarters in the Le Moyne building, Lake and Washington.

The Popular Mechanics magazine has bought from the Harry Price company 40120, on St. Clair just north of its seven-story building now building at the northeast corner of Ontario and St. Clair, for $25,000. Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. were brokers.

Charity Institutions to Share $923,000 Estate

Local charitable institutions are named as the chief beneficiaries in the estate of Mrs. Gertrude Auguste Mitchell, which was closed yesterday by Assistant Probate Judge Phillip J. Finn. The estate is valued at $923,000 which were made to the Church Home for Aged Persons, 4323 Ellis avenue, and the Hahnemann hospital. Four sisters of Mrs. Mitchell, all residing in the east, will receive the income from the residue of the estate, valued at $923,000. At their death the estate is to be divided among seven institutions, three of which are located in Chicago, the Western Theological seminary, St. Luke's hospital, and the Hahnemann hospital.

INSURANCE FRAUD PLOT CONFESSED BY AUTO OWNER

A conspiracy to collect insurance on an automobile falsely reported stolen was uncovered by the Oak Park police last night following the arrest of Louis Lippin, 1428 North Talbot avenue, and E. N. Nooton, who were on their way to dump the alleged stolen car into the stone quarry at Summit, Ill. Lippin admitted he reported the car stolen Feb. 19 and then hid it. It was insured for $800. He was stopped on his way to the quarry by Policemen Kerber and Gill because there were no license numbers on his car. Nooton was following in another car. He also was stopped.

THE VENGEANCE OF HENRY JARROMAN
BY ROY VICKERS

Henry Jarroman, released from prison, to which he was sentenced twenty years before for the murder of Charles Eddie, returned to Camden, his one time friend, who had killed his wife, killed Eddie, and fastened the crime on him. His embittered heart bids him make Camden's daughter a victim.

The girl, who is really his daughter, is the latest victim. She is employed as a typist by the Hon. Wilfred Jarroman, who asks her to marry him.

Gladys Crayne, Jarroman's wife, who deserted him and their child, is the proprietor of a gambling house, and tells her Jarroman wants to find his daughter.

They conspire to substitute Gladys to his former wife, and to give Camden's ring which she wears, knows who she is, and rejoices his victim has been given to him.

He marries Stranack. Jarroman's detective tells him he has discovered she is Camden's daughter and that he has discovered his own daughter, Nell, a girl living in the same house. Jarroman instructs Theed to start proceedings against Gladys to recover the property of his daughter. She reveals the secret to her mother, who tells her Jarroman's wife, tells Gladys she is Camden's daughter and her son to be Jarroman's son for the sake of Wilfred's career. She tells Jarroman she is Eddie's wife, and it was she who killed him. Wilfred learns who Nell is, and, furious because he thinks she has taken for selfish motives the fortune which she has.

Lady Doucester, to heal the breach, confesses to Wilfred that she and his father took Camden's fortune years before, and that it was she who blackmailed Gladys into keeping Jarroman's money. She then tells Theed, "I know who killed Eddie and I know who helped her."

INSTALLMENT LXIX.

JARROMAN AND NELL MEET AGAIN.

"Yes, Nina Eddie killed him. And I know who helped her to do it."

"A most tragic case—most tragic," said Theed, ignoring the last statement entirely. "The poor woman has not been quite sane these twenty years. Egomania, and nothing else. Egomania, as is common knowledge to us lawyers, invariably involves a number of weak-minded persons to confess their guilt every time there is a sensational murder. It is not uncommon for those who are afflicted to try to involve others in their pitiful pretensions to a villainy they don't possess. But, there! 'Of the dead nothing but good,' I will not say another word."

"Of the dead!" The words were torn from Jarroman. He crunched forward, staring.

"The woman died by her own hand in the small hours of yesterday morning," said Theed. "His voice had the reverential hush customary in speaking of the newly dead."

That hush seemed to pervade the room. Jarroman had sunk back into his chair, but his eyes were suffering. Lord Doucester still swayed gently before the hearth. Lady Doucester and Theed looked at each other.

Theed's voice came silkily.

"A tragic case. But then! Are we not at least entitled to hope that the poor creature may, after all, have chosen the best course? I, at least, must be grateful, that she speaks so of such an act. For of course it would have been my positive duty to take action against her for bringing so preposterous a charge against me."

Lord Doucester straightened himself and fumbled in his breast pocket.

"You can still take action, Mr. Theed. Look at this." He had drawn out some three or four sheets of foolscap, closely written and pinned together.

"Perhaps you'd like to read it?"

Theed took the papers. For a second his hand brushed hers. It was cold as ice.

Still standing in the middle of the room, he began to read. As he read he shook his head or nodded it sadly. He sighed more than once. He contrived to look, in fact, exactly like a respectable man struggling against an unjustifiable sense of injury; and there floated from his lips velvet murmurs, of which his listeners could catch only a word here and there—"fantastic invention . . . heartrending malice . . . higher trickery . . . obstinate misconception of facts . . . ."

At last he relented the confession and, bowing, returned it to Lady Doucester.

"I don't think I shall sue you for publishing a libel, Lady Doucester," he said with a mournful smile. "This document is worth nothing, whatever. It was not witnessed."

"Just a minute," said Lady Doucester, clutching it tightly. "What was it the solicitor told me this morning? Oh, yes, a statement signed by a person who knew me well on the spot on the day of the foul deed, the foul deed—the foul—the—de—O, you has the force of a statement on oath, and— and may as such be regarded as evidence given in a court of law or something. I forget exactly how it ran. Probably that's better than I, Mr. Theed."

"May I see that document, Lady Doucester?"

The rasping curtness of the query started even Theed.

For a second Lady Doucester hesitated, then she handed Jarroman the confession. He did not so much as glance at it, but folded it more compactly, speaking the while.

"Lady Doucester, I don't know whether you are right or wrong in saying that the unfortunate lady made a confession to me before she died. I told her that I would take no action whatever. She, like yourself and Lord Doucester, urged a trial. I definitely refused. In view of that refusal, I ask you to allow me to tear up this document."

The last words were a mere shallow courtesy, and Lady Doucester knew it. Jarroman intended to destroy the confession, whatever she might say. She was young enough to thrill at his masterfulness—old enough to have taken glee not to let him frustrate her so easily.

"Tear it up by all means if that will relieve your feelings," she said. "It's in my handwriting, you know, copied in. The original is in that safe." She indicated a safe set in the wall by the side of the writing table.

"You shall have that original, Mr. Theed—when you bring me these statements and title deeds, or whatever they are. There's a car waiting in the drive with a chauffeur and another man. The other man is a detective. He will accompany you to your office. You will not be gone more than half an hour."

Theed did not move.

Jarroman rose from his chair and came heavily forward.

"Pardon me, Lady Doucester. I cannot be a party to what amounts to blackmail!"

"Blackmail!" exclaimed Theed. He looked so profoundly shocked that Lord Doucester with difficulty suppressed a chuckle. "Dear Lady Doucester, I beg you to realize that poor Mr. Jarroman is laboring under a nervous strain."

"I can make my own apologies," snapped Jarroman. "Lady Doucester was well aware that I have no desire to offer a personal insult."

"Precisely," said Theed. "I associate myself, Jarroman, absolutely. The fact is you and I understand this matter, and Lady Doucester—well, how could she? Let us face the facts. That doesn't—that pitiful outburst— and how it came into her possession I cannot guess."

"I found it in my safe box first thing yesterday morning," put in Lady Doucester. "It was well written outburst; but you have no doubt noticed, it writes in times and dates."

"This last pathetic illusion, which Lady Doucester wrongly believes to be a confession," Theed went on, weeping, "would, I admit, cause a considerable scandal if it were produced against me. I should have little difficulty in disproving it—a few minutes in the witness box. But you know what it is, my dear Jarroman—Lord Doucester, you are familiar with old age—if mud is thrown, some of it is sure to stick." Over the newly dead body of this poor woman—ah—figuratively speaking.

"Mr. Jarroman," Lady Doucester's voice was sharp and cool. "You say you would not be party to blackmail. Yet I seem to remember that, upon one occasion, you had no qualms in blackmailing me."

Jarroman began to speak and checked himself.

"Whatever may be your present attitude," she went on in that same level, yet breathless tone, "it is not so long ago since you yourself worked blindly, unscrupulously to an end. Now, while you stand aside, it is I who cannot afford to lay down a single weapon. You were fighting for yourself; my husband and I are fighting for our son, whose future rests upon your fortune. You may despise us, you may avoid us, but I cannot for the life of me see how you dare criticize us."

Jarroman remained staring at her. Lord Doucester stared at the hearth.

Theed stared at the afternoon sky as though his thoughts were far away, half asleep.

The silence held and held. And then, at last, Jarroman nodded a grim smile and turned away.

Lady Doucester waited until Theed's gaze had descended to her level.

"In half an hour, Mr. Theed," she said sweetly, "we shall see you back again."

"Do you realize, dear lady," said Theed, as sweetly, "that if you sincerely command me to have been accessory to the murder of Charles Eddie, you are commanding a felony in giving me in charge?"

"I'm going to compound it," said Lady Doucester. "I'm going to compound it."

Theed looked from her to her husband, from him to Jarroman's remorseless back, and when his gaze encountered hers again, Lady Doucester could have sworn that it was swimming in tears.

"I wish my hands of the whole matter," he said brokenly. "In spite of my financial danger I consider myself justified in resigning my trusteeship of the property. Nothing you could say, Lord Doucester, could persuade me to alter my decision. Further, I give you formal notice, Jarroman, that I must decline to handle your interests in the future. Lady Doucester, I bid you adieu."

He drew himself as erect as was compatible with comfort, closed his eyes, bowed, and withdrew.

The three left in the high, dim library stood motionless. Jarroman's face was still invisible. Lord Doucester might have been meditating a little speech.

Lady Doucester looked suddenly an old woman, painted, powdered, and groomed into a semblance of youth; but in her eyes endurance burned with the fire of eternal youth.

That long silence there came the sound of a car moving down the drive, and then, above the purring of its engines, a contralto shriek that seemed to come from the hall outside.

"Gladys Crayne!"

The spell was broken. Jarroman wheeled round; Lord Doucester smiled apologetically; Lady Doucester went to the door and opened it. A scandalized Mrs. Jarroman could be heard urging the fact that her ladyship was engaged.

"Is that you, Nell?"

WIFE FOILED IN ATTEMPTED RAID ON CLUB WOMAN

COPS FAIL TO GET WRIT FOR MRS. VIOLA GREENE.

(Pictures on back page.)

The Warren avenue police made ready last night to raid the home of Mrs. Viola Greene, prominent clubwoman, at 2708 Warren avenue.

Present in the police station:

Mrs. Mercedes Clason, wife of Clarence Clason, who had filed with his wife in February, 1921; Jay J. McCarthy, Mrs. Clason's attorney; several newspaper reporters.

Everything looked promising when search for a warrant, which Mrs. Clason obtained yesterday in the Court of Domestic Relations charging nonsupport, proved futile. Investigation revealed that it had not been sent to the police station by the court clerk.

In consequence of the visitation of the police to the Greene ménage was deferred until this morning.

Says He's Roomer.

Mrs. Clason declares her husband is a roomer in Mrs. Greene's home. She recently filed a complaint for $100,000 damage suits against Mrs. Greene and her daughter, Mrs. J. P. McMannis. The suit against Mrs. Greene is based on alleged slander and that against the daughter alleges she induced Mr. Clason to remain away from his wife.

A TRIBUNE reporter was received at the Greene home by Mrs. McMannis, who invited him to inspect the house at any time and insisted that he look in some of the rooms. Mr. Clason was not to be seen.

The whole affair is designed to annoy my mother and me," Mrs. McMannis said. "Mrs. Clason's husband is not here for months. He once lived here, but that was after he left his wife. I do not know where he is now and I know nothing of his affairs."

Mrs. Clason resides at 124 East 43d street.

But—She Insists.

"I don't care what those women say about my husband's not being there," she said. "I know that he is there. Nellie can tell me he climbs over the back fence every night and sneaks in through the basement."

Both Mrs. Greene and Mrs. McMannis are prominent socially. Mrs. Greene was one of the organizers of the Colonial club, the Ship of State society, and the Century Social club. She is a member of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Clason said she intended to make sure the warrant was served on her husband today. She said she would accompany the police to the Greene home if they thought it necessary.

THIS fragment diversion has all the native charm of a tiresome yokel telling smutty stories behind the barn.

Its dialogue is compounded in about equal parts of vociferous references to feminine anatomy and sly hints that you are about to see some salacious spectacle which never seems to eventuate. It's chief attraction is the staging of scenes wherein various not too prepossessing females parade in costumes which might have thrilled in the days of "The Black Crook," but which Mr. Ziegfeld and others have relegated to the limbo of things passed along with haircloth sofa and bass-wood whatnots.

To be explicit, all the ladies in the show with one exception wear stock-in-trade.

These vital matters being reported, it remains only to add that "Ladies' Night" is a sterling example of the Police Gazette school of playwriting, having to do with the adventures of a bashful man who goes on a tear for the good of his soul, encounters a police raid, and blindsided into a Turkish bathhouse, where he is supposed to be harassed by the police.

If ever there was a good, stiff, back to the sod, knowledge is power argument, it is "School Days."

I'm just not right on the subject of Wesley Barry. I think he's a world beater. Not because he acts but because he doesn't act. He simply walks into a picture and IS.

The production under discussion is one that young folks mustn't miss and that older people shouldn't. It's a sort of masculine Cinderella (Cinderella) picture with a ragged, orphaned urchin as its hero. His guardian is a cruel deacon with a disposition that "needs a Saturday night bath," but never gets it. His idea of real life for the boy he has is to make him a good, hard-working boy, not too much to eat, enough schooling to comply with the law, and no fun if he knows it. The result of this menu is a brilliant and unmanageable youngster who seeks advice and companionship from a shiftless neighbor who thinks he's an inventor and whose wife and family know he's not.

"Them as has brains don't need schoolin'," he tells his disciple. Closely, he thinks he has brains. He means one day to get money. Then—THEN!

"And just then something hap-pened—"

The urchin finds himself rich and in the great city. He is bidden to buy anything he wants and, if he ever finds the world holds that which money can't procure, to come back and try the simple life and a little knowledge.

He can see what infinite possibilities such a life holds—for Wesley Barry! If you don't you will when you witness the picture.

Whoever chose the cast knew how to pick. The director was on the job. The Butterscotch Pie.

Mrs. S. D. is a "steady reader," wants a recipe for butterscotch pie. Here is an excellent one in which hot water replaces scalded milk and in which only a little of the sugar is browned.

Three-fourths cup of sugar, three-fourths cup of hot water, two yolks of eggs, two and one-half tablespoons of flour, small lump of butter, two egg whites. Beat yolks of eggs well, beat in sugar, add hot water, add butter, and cook to a smooth cream. In another pan cook to a dark brown three tablespoons of sugar. While the cream is hot, turn in the browned sugar and mix well. Flavor with vanilla. To the whites of eggs add two tablespoons of cold water and beat to a stiff froth, then add two tablespoons of sugar. Put cream in a pie crust, the whites of eggs over it, and brown in oven.

Boiling more fundamentally with our butterscotch, we shall bring some sugar with a bit of butter, pour this into scalded milk, and then cook the combination in a double boiler or over the fire, with stirring, until the sugar is all dissolved. Then we may thicken our preparation variously with flour, or with corn starch, or with eggs, or even some flour, or with gelatin.

In any case we get a cooked cream which may be used for a pie filling unless with gelatin or molded. Instead

An old college friend from a distant city was spending the day with me in my country home, and in her honor I prepared a bountiful farm dinner.

IMPENDING COAL STRIKE FAILS TO WORRY INDUSTRY

BY O. A. MATHER.

In neither the financial markets nor in industry is the threatened coal strike viewed with apprehension. A rather clear picture of the situation is offered by the mid-week reviews of the steel industry.

"The seriousness of the coal strike has had little impression on the finished products," the Iron Age says. "Receipts of bituminous coal at 60,000,000 tons are estimated at eight weeks supply and output of nonunion mines has reached 80 per cent of total requirements in recent weeks. The iron market is showing greater firmness in price, in part to uncertainty as to what effect the extended strike will have on prices of coal and in part to increased foundry

Steel Production Increases.

Continued improvement in the steel industry is strikingly shown in the fact that production is now around 85 per cent of capacity. This is the highest percentage in sixteen months and is nearly double that of a year ago.

In March last year the industry as a whole was on a 25 per cent basis, while 80 per cent was the highest mark reached in the brief review of last autumn.

The average output for a month in March was below 50 per cent.

Both the Iron Age and the Iron Trade Review comment on the increasing volume of new business, particularly structural steel, in which March promises to prove the best in more than twenty months. Price advances by several companies have not been generally followed thus far.

1. Reports Decreased Traffic.

The effect of last year's industrial depression and stoppage in the Chicago building industry is reflected in smaller traffic reported by the elevated railroads. Fahr said on the union loop for the six months ended Dec. 31 showed a decrease of $91,767, or 10 per cent. The railroad, however, which has shown an increasing tendency, is doing now about the same as a year ago. The income of the union bus division of the Northwestern Electric railroad for the last half of 1921 was as follows:

The notes were issued solely in exchange for the Victory 4s and books were closed on March 15. New York stood first in conversion with $14,659,000, and Chicago stood with $65,964,800.

Eureka Vacuum Cleaner.

The Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company has issued $600,000 fifteen year 8 per cent notes, constituting its only funded debt and secured by a closed first mortgage on property appraised at $462,974 and also by pledge of a factory lease value of $100,000. The notes will maintain net quick assets of 150 per cent of this note issue and quick assets of at least twice current liabilities. Net earnings after depreciation, but before taxes for four years were 7% times present annual interest charges and for 1921 over fourteen times such charges, giving a wide margin of safety for investors. We consider these notes a suitable investment for a business man's spare funds.

The New York Times.

New York, March 22.—[Special.] In a day marked by several interesting developments, Wall street's attention was chiefly directed to one which did not become known until after the close of business. It was then announced that Northern Pacific's quarterly dividend had been reduced to 14% from 14% per cent, thus establishing an annual 5 per cent as against the 7 per cent rate maintained uninterruptedly since 1904.

The current dividend is payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 12. This action, however, though it was known, was not anticipated over the dividend had been narrow in 1920, the net earnings reported during 1921 increased $2,000,000, and current returns of general railway traffic are propitious.

Expect Big Maintenance Cost.

What the decision on the dividend probably means is that the management expects greatly increased appropriations from earnings for maintenance of property during 1922, and does not expect a cut in the rate of dividend. Expenditure for that purpose, which was none too large in 1920, was cut down $10,500,000 during 1921—process which could not continue.

The reduction in the dividend does not therefore indicate a despondent view of future railway earnings. It doubtless means that improvement is expected to be gradual, not spectacular, and that the wise course is not to take too much for granted.

As for the railway traffic outlook, the weekly "car loading" statement made by far the best showing of the year. For the second week of March the loaded cars not only outnumbered 1921 and 1922 cars by 128,000, or 18 per cent, but rose nearly 100,000 cars above 1920.

Stocks. Bonds.

On the stocks and bonds prices declined irregularly during most of the day, and both railway and industrial shares as a rule closed lower. A rise in call money to 5% per cent had some hand in this. That the bond market regarded it as negligible, in fact the week's decline in acceptances and commercial paper, was about as high as during the first rise of the third and fourth Liberty 4% per cents to higher prices than they have ever hitherto reached on the market. Nearly all European exchange rates advanced and sterling crossed $4.40 again, but the German mark fell to 32 one hundredths, a new low level of its history.
